THE QUILOMENE WILDLIFE

RECREATION AREA, including most of Whiskey Dick and Quilomene Creek drainages, offers a wide variety of recreation. Hiking, sightseeing, photography, nature investigations, research and study, fishing on Wanapum Lake and hunting for elk, deer, upland birds and waterfowl are possible on the area. Non-commercial rockhounding, horseback riding, snowshoeing, skiing, boating, cave seeking and historical study are also allowed on the unit.

Wildflowers add enjoyment for spring visitors.

Access to the area (adjacent to Ginkgo State Park) is from U.S. Highway 10 west of Vantage. All roads are unimproved. Closest tourist accommodations are in Ellensburg. There is a campground at Wanapum State Park downriver.

NO CAMPFIRE OR CHARCOAL FIRES ARE PERMITTED BETWEEN APRIL 15 AND OCTOBER 15. At other times clear an area and keep your fire small, leave no fire unattended and be sure your fire is "dead" out before leaving. Range fire is a constant danger in this area.

SNOWMOBILING IS PROHIBITED; this is a big game wintering area.

HUNTING SEASON IS CLOSED ON ANTELOPE; antelope have been introduced to this area.

ATTENTION ROCKHOUNDS

Unless an area is specifically closed, individual collecting and removing of "rockhound" materials, surface artifacts and petrified wood on game department controlled lands is permitted. There is no charge for non-commercial individual collecting. The following rules are enforced:

Hand tools only may be used for excavation.

Use of explosives and power tools is prohibited.

Twenty five pounds and one piece may be taken each day.

Two hundred fifty pounds may be taken each year.

To preserve scientific and historic values, it is unlawful to rockhound, dig, excavate or collect materials in the area shown by slash line shading on this map.

Wildlife Recreation Areas are managed by the Washington Game Department as wildlife habitat. Other recreational activities are allowed if the use is compatible with wildlife needs.
